AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Strong Love Story of Human Interest In "The Time, the Place and the Girl."

Written primarily with a strong love story of human interest in view, "The Time, the Place and the Girl," the play now being presented at the opera house next Monday, proved that this, when embellished by fun, catchy songs and pretty girls in vigorous dances, is the most successful play that that prolific trio, Will M. Hough, Frank R. Adams and Joseph E. Howard, have turned out. This play broke all records in Chicago, running there 463 consecutive times and has created equally notable records wherever it has appeared.

The scenes are laid at a sanatorium in Virginia, where Johnny Hicks, a happy-go-lucky gambler and his "pal," Tom Cunningham, have fled to escape arrest, as a result of a physical encounter the previous night in Boston. Before the police catch up with them, the sanatorium is placed under quarantine. Cunningham, the "pal," is in reality a rich man's son, and the first love complication begins when he becomes infatuated with Margaret Simpson, "the girl," who is at the sanatorium with her father, a farmer, and her brother and a party of boarding school girls.

As soon as the quarantine is declared, the servants of the hotel and sanatorium desert and the guests are forced to look after their own wants. Cunningham, because of his manner, is chosen dictator of the place and he assigns to each guest a certain task. Hicks, the young gambler, with a profane and typical vocabulary, is made head cook. Margaret Simpson, who has quarreled with Cunningham, following her rejection of his suit, is ordered to do scrubbing and when she refuses, her meals are summarily cut off. She then leads the general strike of the guests. Cunningham, however, proves an efficient strike breaker by jerking off his coat and declaring physical supremacy. Meanwhile, the main love story which has been developing—that of Hicks and the head nurse, Molly Kelly—is entirely out of the ordinary. Added to the complications in which Hicks finds himself, is an enforced treatment of the water cure, caused by a patient who has been sent to the sanatorium. The latter has been directed by his physician to deliver a letter of instructions to the head nurse. This letter he gives to Hicks, and, using Hicks' own language, "Patsy got a free bath."

Among some of the others in quarantine are an attractive widow and her spoiled son; an Italian organ grinder, who falls in love with the widow, after posing as a "gentleman" and is given a heart-breaking refusal; and a coal heaver who tried to escape on account of wanting to get married next morning.
